

Cornell Roundtable on Environmental Studies Topics

Teaching Environmental Studies: What Is Essential?

Barbara Bedford (Natural Resources, ecology) Daegan Miller (History, background teaching environmental studies) Kevin Pratt (Architecture, green design) Laura Eierman (Natural Resources, background in environmental education)

September 12, 2011

12:30 – 2:00 PM

G01 BioTech

Teaching Environmental Studies: What Is Essential?

This roundtable promises to be an impassioned and thoroughly interdisciplinary conversation, bringing together faculty and graduate-student perspectives.

We all teach environmental studies to some extent, but what should our priorities be beyond our immediate disciplinary concerns? How do we want our students to think about the environment? What skills do they need? What scholarly and pedagogical methods or approaches have seemed most successful, based on our recent experiences?